Story Chain

A fun and interactive writing exercise wherein participants will start a story of their own only to pass their paper on to the next person who will then continue it. The process repeats as the writers contribute a line or two to everyone's stories in a timed manner. This event provides an opportunity to test the comprehension and improvisational skills of writers who will have less than a minute each to read an entirely new story and continue it on their own. In the end, the participants get to see how the story they had started at the beginning has ended up and revel in the humour it has wrought.
